Dick Cline moved into Pointe Apartment 1071 on May 10.

After five years in the Navy, he earned a master's degree in soils from North Dakota State University and a PhD in soils from Washington State University. He joined the United States Department of Agriculture Forest Service working in management in Idaho and Montana for the next eight years before coming to the research offices of the Forest Service in Washington, where he remained until his retirement in 2007. Dick has been interested in soil and fossils since he was child. He was involved in the design the Secrets of Soil exhibit at the Smithsonian and served as a docent at the exhibit until it went on tour around the country. He then began volunteering at the Hall of Human Origins. Since the pandemic he has continued to volunteer two days a week working in the "FossiLab" in the Deep Time exhibit. His primary activity is excavating fossils out of matrix blocks from the Petrified Forest in Arizona and, on occasion, rehousing fossils for storage.
